PRESS RELEASE
July 23, 2010

Dr. Matthew Casey Earns Certification by the American Board of Phlebology

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The American Board of Phlebology has announced that Dr. Matthew Casey, an interventional radiologist at MedXray, has earned board certification in the specialty of phlebology from the American Board of Phlebology.

Less than 1% of all phlebology professionals in the U.S. have earned certification from the American Board of Phlebology. To become an ABPh diplomate, an applicant must complete the requisite training or experience qualifications, meet the continuing medical education requisites and pass a stringent certification examination.

This new certification is in addition to being board certified in Diagnostic Radiology by the American Board of Radiology and having a Certificate of Added Qualification in Vascular and Interventional Radiology.

Dr. Casey has been a part of MedXray, a private radiology practice in Sioux Falls, since 2006 and recently helped open our vein clinic, Veradia Interventional Radiology and Vein Center.

Veradia specializes in treating varicose veins and other venous diseases with minimally invasive procedures that have minimal pain and downtime. To learn more about Veradia, check out www.veradiacenter.com.
